“There are times in life when the question of knowing if one can think differently than one thinks, and perceive differently than one sees, is absolutely necessary if one is going to go on looking and reflecting at all.” (Michael Foucault 1985)

This course requires a prerequisite of Sociology 101. No exceptions will be made.

The learning goals of this course will be to analyze mental health data applying sociological theories as well as integrating information from multiple sources. We will study various social aspects of mental illness.

The first part of the course compares sociological with psychological and biological approaches to mental illness. Next, we will consider how selected social factors, including social class, ethnicity, gender, marital status, and age influence the causes and responses to mental distress. The final part of the course concerns various aspects of mental health systems of care and mental health policies.

There will be an exam after each of the three parts of the course. Each exam counts for a third of the grade. There is no final comprehensive exam. All students must take the exams when they are scheduled. You will need a doctor's or otherwise official note to make up an exam. There will be one major extra-credit assignment given to the entire class and no individual extra-credit assignments. Final grades will apply Rutgers University's undergraduate standard grading scale:

A	90 - 100
B+	85 - 89
B	80 - 84
C+	75 - 79
C	70 - 74
D	60 - 69
F	0 - 59

If you need accommodations for a disability or chronic illness please contact the Office of Disability Services at dsoffice@rce.rutgers.edu for an accommodation letter.

This course will apply the current academic integrity policy of Rutgers University. Cheating on exams is a violation of such academic integrity.

Diversity statement: The Rutgers Sociology Department strives to create an environment that supports and affirms diversity in all manifestations, including race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, religion, age, social class, disability status, region/country of origin and political orientation. We also celebrate diversity of theoretical and methodological perspectives among our faculty and students and seek to create an atmosphere of respect and mutual dialogue. We have zero tolerance for violations of these principles and have instituted clear and respectful procedures for responding to such grievances.
